BACKGROUND

When beginning his career as a music editor, Chris Foster had always been inspired by the powerful relationship between music and moving picture. Prior to being a music editor, Chris spent many years as a recording and performing musician as well as a recording engineer before being exposed to audio post-production at Michigan State University. Upon graduation and relocation to Los Angeles, he quickly found his way into the music editing discipline and has not looked back since. He greatly enjoys the collaborative nature of filmmaking and the opportunities he's been afforded to work with some of the top filmmakers, producers and composers working in the industry today. Chris considers every project he's a part of unique and treasures the creative partnerships and learning opportunities each present. As co-president of MICDI Productions, he now leads a staff of fellow music editors and assistants as a part of one of the top music editorial companies in the business today.
